50X1-HUM

1. Polish Air Force units use the following airfields:

- a. Rekowice - in the region of Krakow
- b. Sadkow (Q19) - Radom
- c. Zena - Deblin
- d. Nowa Wies - Modlin
- e. Okęcie (P98) - Warsaw
- f. Lubliniek - Lodz
- g. Krzesiny (X25) - Poznan
- h. Bydgoszcz - Bydgoszcz

2. There is a well-organized WVD cell on every airfield, and it does not form part of the organization either of the air force regiments or divisions. These cells are in touch with the Political-Educational Bureaus and hold "secret" conferences. Members of these cells are authorized to inspect air force units. According to their mission they wear Polish, Russian or simply civilian clothes.
3. The Radom Airfield serves as a supplementary airfield for the Officers' Flying School in Deblin. In July the school at Deblin and Radom formed a unit; it is possible that the school in Deblin trains chiefly assault bomber pilots, while the school in Radom specialized in training fighter pilots.

4. [redacted] no recent information about the 17th Air Force Signal Regiment. It probably existed during the war and in the first period after the war and was subsequently dissolved.

5. [redacted] nothing recently about the existence of the 4th Air Force Division. It has probably been dissolved.
